Russia Coming Back

Russia's vigorous advance in the Bukovina and along the eastern border of Galicia presents interesting and important possibilities. It is a return movement for the recovery of Austrian territories which the Russians gained and lost. Its direction is toward Lemberg, Przemyśl and Jaroslavl, places which played a large part in that first Galician campaign which carried the Russian flag over the crests of the Carpathians. The war was but three weeks old when the Russians began the bombardment of Lemberg, and one week later they were in possession of that great city, in the futile defense of which the Austrians had lost 130,000 men. Shortly afterward they captured Jaroslavl and about the same time the siege of Przemyśl. That was in September, 1914. Przemyśl endured a six months' siege, not surrendering till March, 1915. These successes were of short duration. The tide had already turned, for in February the Russians had found it necessary to abandon the Bukovina capital, Czernowitz, which they had held since the previous October. June, 15, was a particularly disastrous month for Russia in the East Galician region, as the Austro-German forces then regained Przemyśl, Jaroslavl and Lemberg, carrying their counter-attacks as far as the Bessarabian frontier.

As Russia started her present "come back" movement in October last, just at the time the first of the French and British forces were being landed at Saloniki, it may be regarded as the beginning of concerted operations by the allies. Not much has yet been done, but this winter campaign is spreading, and enormous forces are coming to the front. From the Bukovina all along the Volynian border great armies are gathered, and it seems that the needs of the Austro-German defense must have withdrawn large numbers of troops from other fronts. The Russians claim to have regained Czernowitz and broken through the enemies' lines at Czartorsk and Kolki on the Stry. Thus their forces are well placed to converge from southeast and northeast on Lemberg, whence their way lies westward to Przemyśl and Jaroslavl. Russia is perhaps the most enduring winter fighter of all the belligerents. With her reinforced army and her replenished munition and artillery supplies, she will at least prevent the Austro-German armies from taking the rest which they sorely need, and this will count on every front in the spring campaign.—Boston Herald.

MAXIM'S MACHINE GUN.

A Terrible Engine of Death Which Works Automatically.

Early in life Hiram Maxim showed himself a marvelous genius as an inventor. An incident of his boyhood, in which the recoil of a rifle attracted his attention to an apparent loss of power, led him in 1882-2 to utilize the force of the recoil to good account in a gun which loads itself automatically and fires at the rate of 770 shots a minute by the power of the previously wasted force.

The Maxim machine gun is an engine of terrible destruction. This gun has only a single barrel, which, when the shot is fired, recoils the distance of three-quarters of an inch on the other parts of the gun. This recoil sets moving the machinery which automatically keeps up a continuous fire at the extraordinary rate of twelve rounds a second.

Each recoil of the barrel has therefore to perform the necessary functions of extracting and ejecting the empty cartridge, of bringing up the next full one and placing it in its proper position in the barrel, of cocking the hammer and pulling the trigger.

As long as the firing continues these functions are repeated round after round in rapid succession. The barrel is provided with a water jacket to prevent excessive heating.—Philadelphia Press.

GOING ROUND THE WORLD.

The Gain or Loss of One Whole Day in Making the Trip.

In sailing around the world eastward the days are each a little less than twenty-four hours, according to the speed of the ship, as the sun is met a little earlier every morning. These little differences added together will amount to twenty-four hours. This gives the sailors an extra day—not in imagination, but as an actual fact. They will have done an extra day's work, eaten an extra day's ration of food and enjoyed an extra night's sleep.

On the other hand, in sailing westward the sun is overtaken a little each day, and so each day is rather longer than twenty-four hours, and clocks and watches are found to be too fast. This also will amount in sailing around the world to the point of departure to one whole day by which the reckoning has fallen in arrears. The eastern bound ship, then, has gained a day, and the western bound ship has lost one.

This strange fact, clearly worked out, leads to the apparent paradox that the first named ship has a gain of two whole days over the latter, if we suppose them to have departed from port and returned together.—Westminster Gazette.

It never injures, is delightfully cool and pleasant to the scalp, and takes out the dull, lifeless look in the hair, making it soft, fluffy, glossy and beautiful. Two or three applications remove every trace of dandruff, and daily use will prevent its return. The Red Cross Pharmacy has the leading druggists everywhere can furnish you with Parisian Sage—it costs but a trifle.—Adv.

Three Million Idle in the United States Even in Normal Times.

In the January Woman's Home Companion Secretary of Labor William B. Wilson says:

"The magnitude of the normal unemployment cannot be ignored. If we include agricultural pursuits, there are about 3,000,000 people idle in the United States an average of two months; 2,500,000 idle an average of five months, and about 750,000 idle an average of forty-two weeks. Finding a job, therefore, becomes a problem of skill as much as holding the job once it has been found.

"The paramount object of the new employment bureau has been to get machinery in operation by which the unemployed men and women of the country can be picked up in one place and put into another place where labor is needed. It is hoped that ultimately the industries can be so charted that it will be known just what the employing power of an industry is in the months of its maximum pay roll, and be able to know when, in any industry, the maximum and minimum will occur; and how the seasonal industries could to some extent be pitted against one another, the off season in one industry being the rush season of another, thus enabling one industry to take up the other's slack."

Light and Sound and Glass.

Why doesn't the closed window shut out light just as much as it shuts out sound? Both light and sound travel through the air, and their waves come in contact with the glass. The light, after it has gone through the window, seems just as strong or stronger, while the sound seems ever so much weaker. Why is it? Many of us have wondered. The reason is that light is not a wave of air, while sound is. Light is a wave in the ether which is in the glass as well as in the air, so that light in passing through glass still has its natural path of ether. But when sound waves strike the window glass they must put the glass into vibration, and the glass in turn must make the air inside vibrate. All this lessens the strength of the sound waves, and they reach our ears capable of producing a less startling effect than are the light waves which reach our eyes.

Puzzled.

Every man who is not a monster, mathematician or mad philosopher is the slave of some woman or other.—George Eliot.

We are puzzling our brain to know which one of these fellows we are.—Ohio State Journal.
